PRUDENCIA CRA 2 # 11 - 34

From the moment you step inside Prudencia, you clearly see a lot of work was put into this hidden gem. Neighbor and celebrated architect Simon Velez designed all of the new architectural aspects including an iron and glass roof supported by recycled petroleum pipes. The result is a refreshed building that is filled with light while maintaining the imprint of its past. Here you will encounter food from all over the world that is united by a focus on the techniques and cultures of the countryside: local ingredients, minimization of waste, a connection with the natural environment, and preservation techniques that take time, such as smoking and fermentation. INSIDER TIP Open for lunch only. They offer a 4-course menu that changes every week ranging from smoked trout to homemade sausages.

NC-ARTE CRA. 5 # 26B-76

The fundamental purpose of NC-arte is to contribute to the development of visual arts in Colombia. Since its opening in late 2010, it has always offered high-quality programming, inviting prominent national and international artists to show their art through innovative visual projects. INSIDER TIP Whenever you are close to the Macarena neighborhood don't forget to stop by and check the current exhibition: "The Future belongs to no one yet" from the Spanish artist Eugenio Ampudia, until October 1st.

AMEN RAMEN CRA 6 # 53-51

After obtaining his diploma at the Culinary Institute of America and various apprenticeships in Michelin star restaurants in Barcelona, Isaac Monroy travelled to New York to work at Momofuku Noodle bar and Ivan Ramen. Just a couple of months ago he opened AMEN RAMEN, a hip ramen bar in the heart of Chapinero Alto. Rather than offering traditional Japanese ramen, Isaac prefers to break the boundaries and create real comfort food inspired by all the recipes he learned in New York. The industrial interior design is sleek and it invites you to enjoy a bowl of hot and steamy ramen.

INSIDER TIP Order the Chinese style Chashu buns with homemade hoisin sauce to start and finish off with one of my favorites, the Amen ramen or the Dan Dan Noodles.
